COLD CALL/Museum as Muse. I am four years into a multi-year project to design, propose, and build exterior public art for six museums in northern climates that inspire me. The six are the Corning, Tacoma, and Toledo glass museums, as well as the Everson, Peabody Essex, and CCAE. My goal is to examine and reinvent the approach between museums, public artists, community 501C3s, mayors, and public art staff – applying the lessons learned from one city and museum and sharing it with the others. The first of six, Threshold Tessellation, at the California Center for the Arts, a collaboration with Doris Bittar and Wick Alexander is installed!. All will be in LithoMosaic – the first time mosaic at this scale in severe freeze/thaw environments. The overall budget per site – all to be fundraised by me – is about $750,000. See the COLD CALL newsletters online, or call to request a hard copy. 2016 -
